Goal Concordant Care and Medication Use at the End of Life

On admission to Hospice Care, most patients are taking medications that may no longer be necessary for continued use in end-of-life care. Patients, caregivers and clinicians often struggle with the decision to discontinue these medications and how to do so. Medication discontinuation in end-of-life care is likely to be less emotional for all stakeholders when medication use decisions are made in a goal concordant fashion. This presentation will focus on goal concordant care, tools to guide the medication discontinuation process and the essential "less is more" medication use conversation.
